Profile of a Profession: Naturopathic Practice

In Profile of a Profession: Naturopathic Practice by Holly J. Hough, PhD, Catherine Dower, JD, and Edward H. O'Neil, PhD, published by the UCSF Center for the Health Professions (2001), the following corrections are made by this errata sheet:

Acknowledgements page (back of title page), add to list of individuals who reviewed a draft of the study: "Patricia J. Wales"

"The group has a national accrediting body and has taken great strides in standardizing entry to the profession as they define it, improving evidence-based research, and achieving formal recognition by national and regional accreditation bodies."

Page 3, first full sentence, replace with:

"In the eleven states that license naturopathic physicians, the titles 'naturopathic physician', 'naturopathic doctor', and even 'naturopath' may be protected by statute for those who have completed the 4-year medical school-model programs."

The authors apologize for the oversight and regret any misunderstandings these errors may have caused.
